DEATH WAS THE BEST OF ALL.

CHAS. E. EGGLESTON PREFERRED
IT TO YOUTH AND WEALTH.

HE COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Rich and Dissipated Young Chicagoan
Found Dying Monday Morning
in St. John's Hospital.

Charles E. Eggleston, a boy of 22, committed suicide Tuesday morning at St. John's Hospital by taking an overdose of morphine. He had been there nearly a month recovering from a prolonged spree. He was almost ready to go out and why he should have killed himself at this juncture is unexplained by the facts so far disclosed.

Eggleston was the son of C. B. Eggleston of 3336 Indiana avenue, Chicago, a very wealthy man. He was married and since his arrival in St. Louis his wife has been with him. Her present whereabouts are unknown, although she was with him for an hour Monday night.

The young man first came to St. Louis in October, 1896. On Oct. 10 he registered with his wife at the Belvidere Hotel, Thirtieth street and Washington avenue. He was a fine-looking fellow, with fair hair and blue eyes, a most excellent dresser, and despite his smooth-shaven face appeared older than he really was.

This was largely due to his dissipated habits. He drank abnormally for one of his years. He did no work of any kind, living on remittances from his father. Apparently his only aim in life was to enjoy himself and he had the finest kind of a time, according to what he said.

When he was sober enough he attended the theater with his wife and often went riding. But the pace was too swift for the young man's nerves. His drunk began getting the better of him. From "quiet stilles" he evolved into "howling jags," with the result that he would up an unusually long absence three weeks ago last Saturday night.

Dr. A. V. L. Brokaw was called to attend him and had him conveyed to St. John's Hospital, where he might receive careful treatment. He never took a drink after he arrived in the house, according to the statement of the sister in charge.

As soon as he was straightened out he was allowed to leave the hospital. On his first outing he went to the Belvidere Hotel and asked for his wife. She was not there, and he left word where she was stopping. She afterwards looked him up at the hospital.

Last week Eggleston's mother, who knew of his condition, came down from Chicago to visit him. She spent several days with him, returning Friday night, confident that her son would soon be restored to himself, and firm in the belief that he would never drink again.

Monday evening his wife called. She is described as being a slender brunette, well-dressed, but not really two-thirds as good as a strolch. It was Eggleston's first walk without an attendant by his side, and he seemed to enjoy it.

After about an hour they returned, and the wife took her departure. Eggleston went to his room. The sisters heard him walking about uneasily until about midnight, but as this had been his custom since his arrival at the hospital, no heed was given to it.

It had been the custom of the sisters not to awaken the young man for breakfast with the other patients, owing to the fact that he slept so irregularly. He was allowed to eat his breakfast whenever he chose.

But strangely enough on this morning the sister in charge determined to have him get up with the others and sent one of the nurses to his room. The man walked in. Eggleston lay on the bed as though in slumber.

The man shook him. Eggleston did not move. Again he did. He did not move. No response, and, fearing something was wrong, the nurse informed the sisters. Drs. Brokaw and Nixon were hurriedly sent for. As soon as they examined the unconscious man they saw that he was poisoned with morphine.

They worked over him for two hours, but at 12 o'clock he died. His parents were immediately notified by wire and word sent to the coroner's office. The body will be kept at the hospital until some word as to its disposition comes from the parents.

Eggleston is supposed to have taken the drug with which he took his life while out walking with his wife. A thorough search of the room was made, but there was not even a scrap of paper to tell where the drug was purchased. He must have meant to take his life, for he had wanted a sleeping powder he could have gotten it at the hospital.

The sisters do not know where Mrs. Eggleston is. She is not to leave her address. She is not at the Belvidere and the attaches of the hotel do not know where she is. She has been there since she left the hospital, that was to collect the mail, which had accumulated after her departure.

A MYSTERIOUS STRANGER.
Well Dressed Man Who Can't Tell Anything About Himself.
Patrolmen Nixon and Jones took charge of a well-dressed man at Union Station at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning and removed him to the City Hospital for observation as to his mental condition.

He is about 40 years old and wore a neat suit of dark tailor-made clothes. His linen is of good quality and unsoiled. He wore a gray felt cap, his hair was black, but inclined to curl. It is slightly sprinkled with gray. A heavy dark moustache, tinged with gray, adorned his upper lip.

When found by the police he said his name was A. M. He said he was from New Jersey. Aside from this nothing intelligible could be drawn from him. The officials at the hospital said he arrived during the night and wandered around in a dazed sort of a fashion. When taken charge of by the police his pockets were turned inside out. A search of his clothing revealed nothing of value, nor was anything found that would assist in his identification. There is no police think he was robbed, but there is evidence that he had received violent treatment.

JOHN SCHMIDT WILL NOT HANG.

SENTENCE COMMUTED TO 25 YEARS IN PRISON.

HIS MOTHER SAVED HIS NECK.

Through Her Unceasing Efforts the Governor Was Moved to Spare
Her Boy From the Gallows.

When Sheriff Peter Kerth walked into Clayton Jail Tuesday morning fluttering a little yellow slip of paper John Schmidt, who was to die Wednesday for the murder of Artist Betram Atwater, threw up his hands and fell back in his chair overcome with joy.

He knew instinctively by the Sheriff's bearing that good news had come. Sheriff Kerth read the Governor's telegram aloud announcing that the sentence of death on John Schmidt had been commuted to imprisonment for twenty-five years.

The prisoners applauded and showered the lucky murderer with congratulations. Schmidt was too overcome to talk. "Mother did it all," he kept repeating over and over again, as the tears rolled down his cheeks.

The Governor's reason for doing so are fully set forth in the following letter to the Secretary of State:

Executive Department,
State of Missouri.
To the Secretary of State:
Sir: At the October term, 1896, of the Supreme Court, one John Schmidt was convicted of murder in the first degree (on an appeal from St. Louis County Court), and sentenced to be executed on March 10, 1897. He was jointly indicted with two others, for murdering one Atwater, and both of his companions have been executed for the crime.

The murder was not deliberate in the sense that it was the intention of the parties to kill, but the killing occurred in the effort to rob. I am advised that John Schmidt was not the promoter of the scheme, but was persuaded to engage in it by the two who have already suffered the death penalty.

He was of an age to be easily influenced by the promises of a companion. A scheme of robbery, but he was not an active participant in the act of killing. He was wounded nearly fatally by the victim and has already suffered great physical punishment.

Statutes of this State have provided for a scheme to rob which resulted in the death of the victim. He is guilty of murder in the first degree, yet on account of his immaturity, the difficulty of his disposition and the want of foresight which would attend one of mature judgment, I am persuaded that he did not intend to commit murder.

In a general review of these considerations I am convinced that the ends of justice and the vindication of the law would be amply attained by commutation of his sentence to imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term of twenty-five years, without benefit of three-fourths law. Issue accordingly. Respectfully,
LEON V. STEPHENS.
Governor Stephens' action is the result of Mrs. Schmidt's endeavor to save her son from the gallows tree. Since his conviction she has been tireless in her efforts to arouse public sympathy for the young man. She got letters from the trial judge, the juryman, the lawyers on both sides. She circulated petitions among her neighbors in Webster Groves. She had prominent men in the little suburbs where the murder was committed write the Governor of her boy's previous good character and harmless disposition. Finally she went to Jefferson City and made a personal appeal to the Governor.

She was helped by every one but Mr. M. C. Orton, who would have seen Betram Atwater's father-in-law put for the murder and Mayor Fleming of Webster, who was sent to have the third of Atwater's murderers go as his companions.

Her efforts were successful. Had they failed, she has repeatedly said she would kill herself, rather than live to hear of her son's death on the gallows.

Sheriff Kerth was putting the final touches to the arrangements for Wednesday's legal tragedy when the telegram from Jefferson City was handed him at 10:45 o'clock.

All work ceased and the Sheriff immediately sought the prisoner. Schmidt had passed a good night and was exercising in the corridor.

"Let me congratulate you, John, on your good luck. You are going to Jefferson City," said the official extending his hand between the bars.

"Yes," he exclaimed. "I am saved. Won't mother be happy!"

When a Post-Dispatch reporter was admitted, John was pacing before his cell, his face wreathed in smiles.

"Oh, yes, I feel much good over it," he said. "I'm more glad for mother's sake. She will be overjoyed. I didn't care so much for myself. It was on her account. She is coming to see me this afternoon, and I can hardly wait. Gov. Stephens did right. He knows I didn't kill Atwater. I couldn't because I was shot myself."

His request for a telephone message was sent to Mrs. Schmidt, at Webster Groves. The young man had given up hope, and was fully resigned to his fate.

A $10,000 TICKET.
Cornelius Vanderbilt Paid That Sum to See the Inaugural Parade.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—Cornelius Vanderbilt contributed $10,000 to the fund raised by the citizens of Washington to defray the expenses of the inauguration ceremonies, under the agreement that the line of march of the big parade should be extended two blocks beyond the original disbanding point, that the parade might pass the Vanderbilt residence. Mr. Vanderbilt asserted that his illness made it impossible for him to witness the ceremony in any way.

NEW PACKING PLANT.
Kansas City Looking for Wonders From English Money.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 9.—A morning paper says: An immense packing plant, backed principally by English capital, is to be built in Kansas City in the near future. A large European trade is already assured, while at different points through the South branch routes will be established, making one of the most extensive packing firms in the world. St. Louis and Indianapolis men, it is said, will also be interested. No names are given.

VETOED BY GOV. LEEDY.
He Finds Objections to the Kansas Railroad Bill.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 9.—Gov. Leedy vetoed the railroad bill in a message of about 4,000 words. He names six objections to the railroad measure which had passed both Houses. He then discusses the measure in detail, covering each one of his six objections as topics.

"There is about this bill," says the Governor, "a general air of indefiniteness and uncertainty discernible to the most casual inspection, which seems to me to be open to a vast array of legal technical objections. It is impossible to hope that any enforcement of its provisions can be had which would be of any real or practical value to those who

MADE WHITE BUT WILL CITE LOVE.

HE BEAT HIS WIFE FOR ASSAIL-
ING HIS MISTRESS.

FRANK OTHERS' DOWNFALL.

Has Lost Money, Friends and Position
Through His Insane Infatuation for a Courtesan.

There is a man in the Four Courts hold-over who tried to die his life Monday night. He beat her unmercifully and threw her 10-year-old brother out of a cab. The lad was badly bruised, but escaped serious injury.

A crowd on Market street, near Twenty-third, saved the wife. It was a tough crowd, but it could not stomach a man trying to brain a woman. There were cries of "Lynch him! Lynch him!" The man only escaped rough treatment by flourishing a knife and backing away toward a cab into which he pushed a woman. Another woman followed and also a plucky 10-year-old boy.

A moment later one of the women jumped out of the door opposite that through which she had entered. The boy followed, having been thrown violently to the pavement.

All this is the sequel to the unhappy married life of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Others, who live at 2333 Clark avenue with their 2-year-old son.

The story antecedent to the arrest is best told in the words of the woman who is the sufferer. She was seated in a witness chair in Judge Peabody's foul police court when interviewed. The woman was evidently a beauty five years hence if her life is made more pleasant. Today there is a pall of bitterness over her. She was clad in a plain gown, but her hair was one that had cost a deal of money years ago. It is now glossy and frayed. Her hands are delicately shaped, but they have become red. She has been compelled to do washing.

"We have been married five years," she said, and have a boy 2 years old. At the time my son was born Frank, my husband, was traveling salesman for a big firm in this city. I was then 23 years old, and he received commissions as well. We had a pleasant home in the West End and were happy. My name was Bureau before I married. I had many friends in what might be called society. This said rather bitterly.

After marriage I continued my relations with them and Frank being proud of us we were well received.

The trouble began six months after our boy was born. Frank had been called from the road and given a position in the city. He was absent from home nearly as much as before. Accustomed to his being away, I did not pay particular attention at first, especially as he was ever ready with excuses—overwork, nights at the club and being out with friends.

Our money ran short and I became nervous. The blow fell suddenly. One day my husband came home and told me he had been discharged for neglecting his work. I begged him to tell me what it all meant. His sly, cunning action was plain and this result, I said I would forgive him, no matter what it might be. Then he confessed that a woman was at the bottom of the case. She was Mae Nixon, a courtesan, who then lived on Walnut street. He was infatuated with her, but promised to live differently if I would forgive him.

When he found that I would not only at odd jobs, barely enough to supply us with food. Fortunately we still had plenty of money.

Last September the trouble began again. Frank was away nights and again and again. I knew he was not working, for there was no money coming in. One night he came home and told me that he had been discharged from his position. I begged him to tell me what it all meant. He said he was infatuated with a woman named Mae Nixon, who then lived on Walnut street. He was infatuated with her, but promised to live differently if I would forgive him.

LOOK OUT FOR ANDRE. Canadians Instructed to Watch Him Sail to the North Pole.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
OTTAWA, Ontario, March 9.—Sweden has notified the Government here that Mr. Andre will start from Stockholm about the end of June for Spitzbergen to attempt his balloon voyage to the North Pole, and it requests that instructions be given to Canadian officials to report the balloon if it is sighted.

INTRUDERS DEFIANT. Sooners Refuse to Leave the Uncompaghe Reservation.

PRICE, Utah, March 9.—The orders from Department Headquarters to remove the intruders from the Uncompaghe reservation have not yet been received and hundreds of settlers still remain on the reservations and declare that nothing but a military force will move them off. The "sooners" openly defy the agency officials and many of them are actually working their claims.

MIDDLESBORO, Ky., March 9.—Leslie Combs, the most noted moonshiner in the mountains, was found dead near Hazard with his throat cut. He was a Confederate hushwhacker. He claimed that he had killed fifty men.

THE WEATHER FORECAST.

10:25 a. m.—The cord of Turkish troops drawn around Akrotiri is now being retracted by the insurgents. Severe fighting is proceeding.

The fighting between the insurgents and the Turks commenced at 2 o'clock this morning and continues all along the line. Communication by road with Suda Bay is cut off.

A Turkish transport, with civil officials and troops, has arrived here with small-pox on board.

Advices received here from Hierapetra say that owing to the refusal of the Mussulmans to surrender the fort there, the insurgents attacked it, whereupon the Italian cruiser shelled the insurgents.

LONDON, March 9.—Business on the Stock Exchange this morning was dull, with prices dropping. Orders were waiting developments in the Cretan question. The general impression in competent quarters is that the Powers will not accept the proposals of Greece, and that they will carry out their threat of coercing Greece, if necessary.

It is believed, however, that the Greek reply is only intended to soften the shock of surrender to the excited Hellenes and that after a brief pretense of opposition the government of Greece will discover the futility of opposing the will of United Europe, always supposing that Europe is united in this matter, and that the compliance of Greece will follow.

It was stated this afternoon in official circles that the renewal of fighting between the insurgents and Turks in the island of Crete will have the effect of making the Powers take action in expelling the Greeks from that island and landing foreign troops.

MARJORIE MCKINLEY MORSE.
The granddaughter of President McKinley, who will visit the White House in the spring and will be the pet of the Administration.

LEXIS NO HURRY.

MAY EARLY ENOUGH FOR KERENS' APPLICATIONS.

WHAT MISSOURIANS WANT.

The Ex-Congressmen and Many Other Republicans Have Picked Out Their Jobs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 9.—President McKinley received a visit today from a body of office hunting Missourians. They quit drawing salaries March 4, but are exceedingly anxious to re-establish connections with the National Treasury.

The party consisted of the Republican ex-congressmen from the State. Each is an applicant for a job. Not satisfied with two years' salary as members of the House, with mileage and "per diem," they now want to secure for themselves all the patronage the State is entitled to.

Crowther would like to go to Core, Burton wants to be United States Attorney for the Western District, Clark wants some kind of a job with a salary attached. Foster wants to be Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General. He is also applying for the place of Commissioner of Internal Revenue. "Dally" Mosley would like to be one of the Assistant United States Attorneys. Hubbard is after a place as Railroad Commissioner to succeed Gen. Wade Hampton.

Raney and Van Horn are the only ones who are not waylaying the President. Mr. Hittiger of the St. Joseph Gazette is opposing the aspirations of Mr. Leubman, ex-President of the Carnegie company, to the same mission.

President McKinley has let it be known that he is in no hurry to make nominations. He has also served notice that it is not worth while for anyone to worry him about becoming Minister to Spain, Greece or Turkey. He intends to go slow in appointing the present ministers to those countries. It is believed he will be equally slow in naming the Consul General to Havana.

When Richard C. Kerens of Missouri went to President McKinley with his grip-sack full of recommendations for the appointment of his supporters in Missouri he was told that such matters would not be considered until after the tariff bill was passed by Congress. When Mr. Kerens expressed some anxiety lest his supporters be overlooked, he was assured that no local appointments would be made until the commissions of the present incumbents expire, and that his friends would be early enough with their applications if they came in May.

Mr. Kerens has gone home. It is said that Senator Foraker has won in his fight against Bellamy Storer, who was to have been First Assistant in the State Department. Mr. Storer may be given a foreign berth.

Senator Mason of Illinois ran against the anti-faction rule with some violence on Saturday. He went to the White House with a bundle of recommendations and attempted to leave them with the President. "Has Senator Cullom endorsed these papers?" asked the President. "No," replied Mason, frankly. "He has not."

Then I wish you would take them away," said the President, "and go over them with him before you bring them to me again. I want you to get together and agree among yourselves as to what you want before you bring them to me."

Gen. Haynes of Illinois is being urged by Pension Commissioner by the Illinois delegation. It is rumored that ex-Senator Cameron may secure the Ambassadorship to Berlin. Gov. Hastings and Wm. Elkins, the street car man, are also mentioned. It is conceded that the Ambassador will come from Missouri.

John Russell Young seems to be leading for the position of First Assistant Secretary of State. Senator Cullom has drawn out of the race for President in the Illinois delegation. The son of President Arthur is a candidate for Secretary of Legation, France preferred.

Col. Fred Grant desires one of the European missions. He began with Berlin, but is now willing to take something less. One of the sons of President Hayes and one of the sons of President Harrison are let the President know that they are willing to accept something.

John A. Logan is openly a candidate for Minister to Austria. Fifty prominent Republicans of St. Louis have signed a request to the President to appoint ex-Gov. Thomas C. Fletcher Register of the Treasury.

Don Cameron is said to have been slated for the Berlin mission. William Sinclair has been appointed steward of the White House. H. G. Otton of Oklahoma, Mo., who was the Republican candidate for Congress in the Third District, is a candidate for an auditorship.

J. Walter Blandford, who has been private secretary to Secretary Olney, has been selected to act in a similar capacity to Attorney-General McKenna. Minister Blandford has resigned and it is understood that Gen. Powell Clayton will succeed him.

California's delegation endorses M. H. De Young for Ambassador to Italy.

headed by Chairman Dingley. They filed a bill, and were cordially greeted. This, too, was a call of courtesy and no reference was made to the tariff.

Senator Alton of Iowa called to urge the appointment of St. Louis to the great Swedish inventor, Ericsson. Mr. Dingley placed on the floor a bill for the relief of the inventor, Ericsson. Mr. Dingley placed on the floor a bill for the relief of the inventor, Ericsson.

Among the other callers who saw the President were Senator Morse of Vermont, the venerable head of the Senate Committee on Finance; Senators Cullom and Mason of Illinois; Fritchard of North Carolina; Penrose of Pennsylvania; Elkins of West Virginia; McCreary of Louisiana; Hawley of Connecticut and Representative Hitt of Illinois. Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, Mr. Borden, the new Democratic Senator from Louisiana, was accompanied by ex-Marshal Pitkin of that State. Among the callers from private life were Murat Halstead and Powell Clayton.

The Cabinet meeting lasted an hour. Secretary Sherman, Gage and Alger were the first to leave, and Mr. Gage came from the cabinet room soon afterwards. The Attorney-General, Secretary of the Navy and Secretary of Agriculture remained some time longer.

Huge bundles of applications for office were sent from the White House today to the various departments. They comprised some 10,000 applications received at the White House. He had been at work on them in advance instead of waiting for the values of some coming in. With these 10,000 disposed of the officials were able for the first time to get a glimpse of the incoming mail. A rough estimate by Mr. Boyle, who is in charge of the correspondence, is that 10,000 letters have been handled within recent months.

Attorney-General McKenna and Secretary of the Navy were the last to leave. The President was informal, however, the President and the cabinet members were in a jovial mood. The President was in a jovial mood. The President was in a jovial mood.

It stated that no question of importance came before the cabinet meeting, the remark being made that fortunately affairs as to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines were quiet at present. The Attorney-General was also present. The Attorney-General was also present.

Dr. Greene, 35 West 14th St., New York City, the most successful physician in curing diseases, can be consulted free, personally or by letter.
